

From: Kedar Soman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/9/01 12:41pm
Subject: Current ruling will not curb microsoft bad practices

Dear Madam / sir,

I sincerely believe that the microsoft ruling is not going to achieve the main goal of stopping microsoft from following antitrust policies. Over the years the company has grown into giant, but still it's greed is not fulfilled. It's greed was healthy at one time and the company expanded by making quality products like MS office. But recently they have stopped making quality products and started these kind of strategies to make money.

The current ruling, in my opinion, does not do anything to stop these practices. This again allows microsoft to propogate their own softwares which means ultimately in microsoft interest. So this is not punishment for microsoft, but blessing.

Thanks for letting me write,

Kedar Soman

**

From these many years of living, I learnt one thing about life.
It just goes on.....
- Robert Frost

**